HUNDREDS OF FARMS WILL BE RECLAIMED

Work of Irrigating Montana Is Progressing Rapidly Under Direction of Reclamation Engineers—Vast Enterprises Have Been Undertaken

Billings, Mont., June 21.—Engineers of the reclamation department of the government are making surveys for necessary extensions of the main canal of the Hunter project for a distance of ten miles towards Pompey's Pillar, and for a distributing system, also for an extension and distributing system of the high line canal which is operated by the pumping plant in the Fly Creek country east of Billings. A large reservoir will be constructed and the area thus brought under irrigation will furnish farms for more than one hundred families. None of this land is now settled; in fact, it is not yet open to entry, and when the projected work is completed it will mean that fully five hundred persons will find homes thereon.

Such is the information given out today by H. N. Savage, chief engineer of the reclamation department of the Northwest. Engineer Savage was in the city on his way to Huntley for the purpose of seeing how the work is progressing.

"The new tract will be opened to settlement under the same regulations as was the main part of the Hunter project," said Engineer Savage, "but the units will be slightly altered in size, with many of them a full quarter section, and forty acres and upward of each will be irrigated. I cannot say precisely when the canal and distributing systems will be completed, but we will carry on the work just as rapidly as it is possible to do so."

"At the present time the reclamation department has $7,000,000 up to $1,000,000 from the sale of public lands which is used in carrying on its work, and we are getting in readiness to utilize the result of the increased bond issue of $10,000,000 now being considered by congress. With this we will get things in splendid shape. We expect to keep well ahead of the demands of the homesteaders for this irrigated land."

In commenting on conditions on the project, the engineer says they are flourishing, that fewer than two hundred units remain unappropriated and that they are being taken at the rate of about ten each month.

"The district is being settled as rapidly as is healthy, the farmers are raising alfalfa and other crops and are prospering."

"The settlement of the Hunter project is the biggest kind of a complete success, and three-fourths of the people at least now agree that the small area idea is correct. By cutting it up in small tracts, fully three times the population results, and the farming is carried on in an intensive manner. There is no objection on the part of the settler himself, but whatever adverse comment ever was made came from persons who had done little or no actual farming and who were accustomed to handling very large areas, principally for stock purposes."

Engineer Savage says that work on all of the other irrigation projects under his jurisdiction is going along in a satisfactory manner.

Other Projects.
"The Lower Yellowstone project is in nice shape and settlers are just beginning to make use of the system under which 46,000 acres are irrigated. This section is being rapidly settled and a new territory is being opened up by the Northern Pacific, which is building a line from Denver to Sidney on the north side of the Yellowstone River. Batts will be laid for this line and trains will be in operation in time to handle the immense crops of the farmers."

The large project in the Milk River country is being handled by sections and the work on the first part of 5,000 acres is virtually finished, so that water will be turned into the big canal by the middle of the present month.

"This tract extends between Dodson and Malta, on the south side of the Milk River, and is a splendid country, surveys are being made for canal of the second unit between Hinsdale and Glasgow, and we expect bids to be requested in the near future for another unit which will be irrigated by a canal which will take its water supply from the Dodson dam and extend on the north of Milk River."

Regarding the Shoshone project, recently opened in Northern Wyoming, the engineer says the great Shoshone reservoir is now being filled and that this reservoir and the immense dam 125 1-2 feet high will regulate the entire discharge of the Shoshone River.

"There is sufficient water to irrigate 40,000 acres and the project, which is one of the largest in the world, is being rapidly settled by the most excellent class of homesteaders. The land is time and the opportunity to secure good irrigated tracts is now open to actual settlers."
